

Music with Young Children: Why do it?

Saturday 28 April 2012 | 9.30–4.30pm

Duchesne Building, Digby Stuart College,
University of Roehampton, London

This conference will help anyone intending and already working in music with Early Years and families. It explores the way music runs through young children's lives; their relationships, their communication, their physical and emotional development and their thinking. It brings together current topical issues facing practitioners and carers through presentations and workshops with National and International experts. It raises questions of relevance to national policy frameworks and to research and reflective practice.

Keynotes Dr Susan Young, University of Exeter

'Music: why do it – current dilemmas and decisions'

Prof Minna Huotilainen, University of Helsinki, Finland

'Music and brain development'

Early bird rate*: £70.00 | Full rate: £90.00 (Rates include lunch, refreshments and a delegate pack)
